

MR GREEN MONOLOGUE

My politics! Since when is working for the Republican Party a crime?

I swore an oath of allegiance to the Republican Party, but I neglected to vote for Eisenhower in the last election.

That's grounds for an ousting if ever there was one!

But voting records are confidential!

Everything has its price, I suppose.

Oh, sorry. Sorry. I'm afraid I'm a little accident-prone.

I don't know why, I just get nervous in unfamiliar situations, and then I start to overthink everything, and then I start to apologize for things that aren't even my fault, and then somehow they become my fault.

I mean, I like to follow the rules. That's sort of my thing. Rules are good. Rules are comforting. You know where you stand with rules.

But when there aren't any rules, that's when things get complicated. That's when people start lying, and sneaking around, and drinking things they probably shouldn't be drinking, and suddenly I'm in a room with total strangers and two dead bodies and I don't even know where I'm supposed to stand.

Sorry. Sorry. I'm just trying to be helpful.
